The restaurant's name may come from a famous Montreal hot-dog stand, and one of its chefs, Aidan O'Neal, may have cut his teeth at Au Pied de Cochon, the High Temple of Quebecois offal-heads, but I'd say its most Montreal-like quality is a homey sense of great care and little fuss. A snug snack shop across from the Guatemalan consulate offers a taste of Central America in Jefferson Park. Traditional Southern food and soul food overlap.
