The Peruvian commander, Lizardo Montero, refused to try to drive the Chileans from the beachhead, as the Chileans had expected. These statues often possess real artistic merit, and the works of the Ayacucho sculptor Medina, at the Lima Exhibition, were universally admired. This system, called repartimiento, was ostensibly for distributing European goods to the natives, but it was converted into a means of wholesale robbery.

An artillery bombardment between the two armies was exchanged, with the Chileans. The liberals rose in arms under General Freire : in a few months men were killed and wounded, and finally the liberals were defeated in the battle of Lircay. The fallen Director, so ungratefully treated by his own country, retired to Peru, and was generously received in the land of the Yncas. After many losses the expedition achieved very little and returned to Lima in time they fought and eventually won an important victory in the Battle of Portada de Guías and thus the liberation force was able to enter the city of Lima.
